A Brief History of Allegany County

Allegany County is located in the Southern Tier of Western New York, with its center approximately 90 miles due south of Rochester. There are about 50,000 citizens residing in the County’s twenty-nine townships, ten villages, and numerous hamlets.

Allegany County was created by an act of the State Legislature effective April 7, 1806. The County’s population in 1806 was just a few hundred people and grew to almost 30,000 by 1860. Soldiers serving under Generals Sullivan and Clinton during their 1779 campaign to eradicate the Indians from Western New York would soon be some of the first settlers in the Genesee Valley. These rich, fertile farmlands drew land-hungry farmers during the time of the opening of the Erie Canal in 1825 and the building of the Genesee Valley Canal shortly thereafter. This latter canal offered new opportunities for harvesting and marketing vast tracts of virgin timber and agricultural products from the Genesee Valley.

Of the many elements of change that have affected Allegany County, the one that had the greatest impact was the arrival of the Erie Railroad in 1851. The immediate improvements in people’s lives included rapid transportation of people and mail, access to markets overnight for products shipped to and from the County, and the relocation of the County Seat from Angelica to Belmont in 1859.

The American Civil War of 1861-1865 brought the greatest tragedy and loss of life in Allegany County’s history. Over 3,700 men served in the military and approximately 600 were killed. Life on the home front was forever changed as well, with great sacrifices by the women and children who had to “fend” for themselves while operating the family farms, businesses, and social institutions with so many men gone to war.

The growth of large, heavy industry in the mid-to late-1800s was apparent in the County, with many facilities located in the Wellsville area. The first of these was the tanbark/tanning industry that brought about the building of narrow-gauge railroads. The oil boom of the late 1800s and again in the 1920s brought great prosperity to the southern part of the County. The oil industry gave rise to many “spin-offs” industries in the area, such as early steam turbine manufacturing, pipeline supply businesses, and additional narrow-gauge railroads serving the oil fields.

Today, the largest area of employment in the County is education. Venerable Alfred University was founded in 1836 and is the nation’s second oldest four-year, co-ed Liberal Arts University. Also located in Alfred is the State University of New York College of Ceramics and the State University of New York College of Technology with two and four-year degree programs. In the nearby Village of Wellsville is the Alfred Applied Technology campus, a branch of Alfred State. In the northern part of the County is Houghton College, a four-year, co-ed Liberal Arts College affiliated with the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

The County Seat is in the Village of Belmont with about 400 full-time employees working for the County. The County is governed by a Board of Legislators, consisting of fifteen members with three elected from each of five districts. These Legislators cannot serve in an elected position for any other governmental entity.

Allegany County is fortunate to be located on Interstate 86 and to be served by the Western New York and Pennsylvania Railroad. The major north-south road is State Route 19. The largest village in the County is Wellsville, home of the Wellsville Municipal Airport/Tarantine Field which is capable of handling corporate jet aircraft.
